WHAT IT COSTS

One hundred million dollars has been lopped off the government estimate for the new fiscal year by the president. Even with this reduction the nation will spend during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1928, some fifty-five millions more than it had expected to spend in the current fiscal year. However, responsibility for this increase rests with congress which passed an appropriation for the Spanish War Veterans amounting to thirty-six million; for the Veterans Bureau, eighteen million; and sixteen million for the Civil Service Retirement Act. In connection with these measures, it should be said that the President signed them after congress passed them, and has no desire to avoid responsibility. The President stands for economy and saving, but in the broadest sense. Economy which will provide the means and wherewithal for constructive spending. That is the goal towards which he is aiming in which he is sustained by the people of the country at large.

Exercises Which Reduce Hips and Abdomen

Keeping the hips delightfully slender and the diaphragm and abdomen flat has been the bane of women since slenderness became the fashion. Where the rest of the body may be of slyph like slenderness the lot that gathers round the waist is the Waterloo of would-be-slyphs. What matters a wrist and ankle of delicate slenderness and a swan like neck of aristocratic proportions if one's frock is tight about the hips? It's the slenderness of the waist, diaphragm and hips that make women beautiful these days and woo to their ambitions for chic svelteness if they have it not.

There are exercises, however, which, if taken regularly and in time, will ward off the natural enlargement of the waist as one grows older, or will at least lessen the size of rounded hips, thighs and abdomen once it accumulates. Some of the more important of these exercises are given by Estelle Clark, one of the charming players of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot, who demonstrates how they should be done.

One of the best of these waist reducing exercises, which reduces the hips and hardens the muscles of the abdomen and diaphragm all in one, is the one posed by Miss Clark. Lie flat on your back and raise your legs as high as you can until you touch the floor black of your head with your toes. This exercise is very strenuous and at first it should be taken slowly. If you are not accustomed to exercise, raise the legs slowly until they are in a right position.

What's In A Name?

WHAT'S IN A NAME
The Origin, Meaning and Magic
Of Your Name
By LESLIE GRAY

Olive or Olivia ought to be a peaceful, quiet person but a generous giver of gifts.

The name Olive or Olivia for ages has been regarded as a symbol of peace, not only among European Christians, but generally throughout the world.

The myth remains of the dispute between Neptune and Minerva. Both deities wished to found a city upon the same site and finally failing to come to an arrangement they agreed to place the matter before Jove. This first among the deities decreed that the one who bestowed the most useful gift upon the future inhabitants of the contemplated city should be given the privilege of founding it. Neptune at once struck the earth with his trident and a war horse sprang forth. Minerva produced an olive tree, the symbol of peace. Jove awarded the coveted honor to the goddess and the olive branch became the emblem of the city.

In China the practice of sending a bit of red paper and an olive to the aggrieved party in a quarrel, as a sign that peace should be restored has been known for centuries. In Greece the olive is looked upon as a token of peace and friendship.

In Christian art St. Agnes has been represented with a palm branch in her hand and with a lamb at her feet crowned with olives and holding a branch in its mouth.

Thus Olive in its significance is one of the prettiest of our names. Olivia was at one time very fashionable but its pretty Angelized form, Olive, is now more popular.

Now that they are singing jazz hymns in some of the churches, why not have the preaching in the form of a cross-fire act, and the choir do a minstrel first part?

That Child Of Yours

By Ruth Matthews

More than one nice child has been spoiled because his mother has discussed his accomplishments too freely in his presence. Bobby and Betty may appear deeply engrossed with their play things, but at the same time, those quick little ears are kept cocked for bits of the conversation, pertaining to themselves. Children hear so much more than we imagine they do, you know, and what is more, they understand it all.

"Oh, isn't he a dear?" It is our first impulse to exclaim, just as though the chubby little fellow with the tousled head of ringlets and the bright black eyes were a cunning piece of furniture or a fat little puppy. But he's quite human and therefore quite susceptible to flattery. He reacts to it, after a while, in a manner which calls forth less flattering remarks.

Just because it pleases a mother's vanity that her friends notice her attractive youngster, does not justify the disastrous results. After Bobby has been subjected to especially flattering attentions, it is a good plan, to point out to him, some other little children and to explain that they, too, are to be admired for the same good qualities.

"Oh, I must tell you about the perfectly cunning thing that Jack said this morning." How I do writhen when I hear a mother relate an incident of this kind, while at the same time, out of the corner of my eye, I can see Jack, fairly standing on tiptoe to listen! Invariably, after such a recital, Jack tries to "show off."

The irresistibility of a beautiful child, lies in his perfect self-consciousness. His charm lies in his innocent naivete. What a crime, to rob him of this by reminding him constantly, that he is watched. All too soon, a child becomes aware of the eyes of the world and imagines that they are all focused upon himself.

Praise and encouragement he should have from his parents. That inspires him to do things well and gives him self confidence. But it should be direct praise, and reserved for such occasions as he deserves it. It is simply to repeat what hundreds of others have written, to say that a boasting mother becomes a bore. Funny though, isn't it, how many we still have with us?

What chance has a cunning kid, against vanity, when he is surrounded by an admiring group of grownup relatives? Not one in a hundred! If I were the mother of such a child I'd pass a resolution against flattery and would be the poor wretch who broke over!

What insufferable little rosters, children with too many doting aunts and grandparents can become!

Besides all of this, consider the matter from the stand point of good manners. Good taste does not permit you to praise and compliment your friends before others. It is embarrassing for everyone concerned.

Conceit has spoiled more than one pleasing personality. It is unnecessary that your child cultivate it and you should make every effort to remove the cause.

BEAUTY HINTS

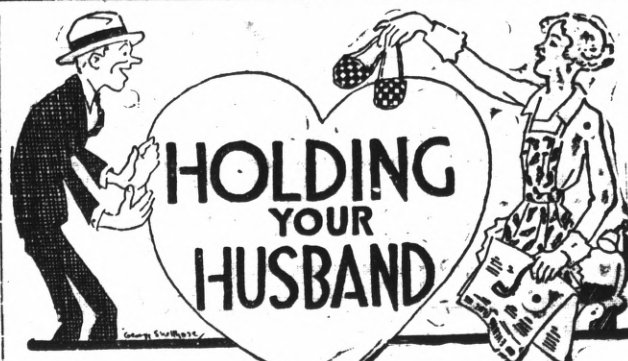

By Peggy Hopkins Joyce

This is a popular season for Bijou. Necklaces and bracelets are much in vogue, and these enhance greatly the appearance of many girls and women. Others of a quieter type, often exquisitely lovely girls, will do well however to forego too many beads. They often give an appearance of clutter to the wearer. It is perfectly natural that we should enjoy adorning ourselves; it is a cosmic quality in women, I suppose, but there is a big and constant menace in overdoing it.

And always make it a point to see that the clasp of necklace or bracelet does not slip around in Never tell your wife to "keep her hair on." It may be time to make a switch.

Sight. To use a vulgarism, which fits the case with exactness, it appears "sloppy."

By Lorene Bowman
POLLYANNAISM

There is something the matter with a wife who spends more time dressing herself than dressing the wounds (fancied or real) of a sick husband. Men are most susceptible at this time. Stop, stay and sympathize or you will be committing an error for which you will be craving consolation in the future. This is the time when it is more blessed to give than to grieve. Acute loneliness is dangerous for a husband—or wife.

And to have no one to whom to tell a bit of fun or to consult about cherished plan, is loneliness indeed. This is just the time when the fire in your hearth will burn to ashes if not kept burning by kindness. If your husband is a bit discouraged, he will never love you better, if without consideration for veracity you put your arms about him and say, "George you are superb!" There is no place that Pollyanna is as popular as in the home.

Famous Unsolved Mysteries

THE VANISHING OF KENT LOOMIS

What was the fate of Kent Loomis, who acting as a diplomatic courier for the United States government, disappeared from an ocean liner while nearing the coast of England? Was he thrown overboard by persons who wanted to prevent his completing his mission or did he meet accident by drowning or did he end his own life? Time probably never will tell.

Early in 1904 the United States ratified a treaty with King Menelik of Abyssinia, who avowed himself a linear descendant of Queen Sheba. The assistant secretary of state commissioned his younger brother, Kent J. Loomis, as a special courier to bear the treaty to Addis-Ababa, King Menelik's capital.

Young Loomis who was the editor of a newspaper in Parkersburg, W. Va., was eager to carry out the mission for his government and had planned to hunt big game in Africa afterwards. He sailed from New York on the liner Kaiser Wilhelm June 14.

On midnight June 19 he was seen on the deck following the customary Captain's dinner. The ship was to call at Plymouth the following morning. When the ship arrived one passenger declared he had seen Loomis disembark, and that he had seemed dazed, but the captain and a steward who stood at the gangway denied this. At Cherbourg the vessel was searched thoroughly but it yielded no trace of the missing courier.

William H. Ellis, Loomis' cabin mate, made the trip to Abyssinia and fulfilled the mission for the government at Washington.

During several weeks there were reports that Loomis had been seen in London and Paris but none were authenticated.

On July 16, a body identified as that of Loomis was washed up at Warren's Point, fifteen miles north of Plymouth. A wound under his left ear had caused death, physicians said.

THE MOTHER OF JULIUS ROSENWALD

"I regard as a fresh gift from God every day he spares my mother to me," said Julius Rosenwald, the famous merchant who built up the gigantic mail-order house of Sears-Roebuck and company to what it is today. And he said it when his mother was eighty-five years.

The great love that Rosenwald has borne for his mother is a beautiful thing to record. As early as his fifteenth year, when he spent his summer vacation working in a store, he took all the earnings that came to him for grinding away at a job instead of playing with the other boys through a summer's holiday, and bought his mother an expensive—for him—teaset, as a present for her twentieth wedding anniversary.

It was the best use he could think of to put the money. A visitor to his office some years ago told of how, while he was talking to Rosenwald, the telephone rang. Rosenwald answered and then his face immediately broke into a joyous smile. "That was my mother," he said excitedly, "she is coming to see me. She hasn't been here in four years!" And from that moment he couldn't sit still but kept continually glancing out of the window. When he saw her coming he rushed out to meet her and thereafter work was suspended as far as the president of Sears, Roebuck and company was concerned.

Whenever he was in town, Rosenwald visited his mother every morning before coming to work. And when he returned from out-of-town trips the first thing he did, irrespective of how urgently he was needed at the office, was to call on his mother.

Rosenwald is noted for being one of the large-hearted philanthropists in this country, and it is easy to see what influence made him so.

A good way to increase postal revenue would be to print the pictures of bathing beauty prize winners on the postal stamps instead of historical persons and scenes like General Grant Crossing the Jersey Swamps or Henry Ford Astride the Iron Horse.

"DIZZY'S" SURPRISING ROMANCE

"Dizzy married me for my money," Mrs. Wyndham Lewis used to say to her friends "but if he had the chance again he would marry me for love."

This statement by the lady who became Lady Beesonfield is not to be taken seriously, for while the extraordinary marriage of a celebrated statesman to a woman fifteen years his senior and a widow, gave rise to all sorts of conjectures and uncomplimentary rumors, the married life of the Disraeli's was such a happy one as to dispell all doubts.

Mrs. Wyndham Lewis was the widow of an English political leader. She was not what one would call beautiful and the weight of those fifteen extra years must have been a heavy one for her to carry. Disraeli at this time was already famous and recognized as a man with a mighty future. What then attracted him to this woman is one of the emotional mysteries of the world. They said that Mrs. Lewis was rich. She was, in a way, but it is known that her wealth was not so great as to entice a man whose career was so assured and who bore the reputation of being one of the most brilliant men in the British Empire.

The talk about the money end of this romance hurt Disraeli very much and to dispel it he wrote the following letter to Mrs. Lewis, which states the case more plainly and logically against a mercenary match than anyone has ever proved otherwise:

"... Now as to your fortune, I write the sheer truth. That fortune proved to be much less than I or the world imagined. It was, in fact, as far as I was concerned, an amount which could not benefit me in the slightest degree; it was merely a jointure not greater than your station required; enough to maintain your establishment and gratify your private tastes.

"To rest and to sleep in that house and nominally call it mine—these could only be the objects of a penniless adventurer. Was this an inducement for me to sacrifice my sweet liberty and that indefinite future which is one of the charms of existence? No; when months ago I told you that there was only one link between us, I felt that my heart was inextricably engaged to you, and but for that I would have terminated our acquaintance. From that moment I devoted to you all the passion of my being."

In a letter more removed from mundane affairs the statesman rhapsodized in this fashion:

"Tis twilight after a lovely day, but I have no dark thoughts. All my emotions are soft and glowing as the sky. Sweetest and dearest of women, our united loves shall flow like two rivers; as gentle and as joyously. . . Bless you, and bless you, and bless you."

"I love you, if possible, each day more truly and more tenderly. All my hopes of happiness in life are centered in your sweet affections and I wish only to be the glory and solace of your life."

Judging by the crowd in attendance at the opening of the St. John's Catholic church bazaar in El Cerrito it will be one of the most successful ever held by the church. Every one voted that they enjoyed a wonderful time and the many booths were patronized by a large crowd.

The bazaar will continue until Sunday when a big chicken dinner will be served at 12 o'clock by the ladies of the church.

WILDERNESS WOMAN NOW AT THE CALIFORNIA

Aileen Pringle, Lowell Sherman and Chester Conklin carry off all the acting honors in "The Wilderness Woman," the new Robert Kane picture for First National, which was shown for the first time last night at the California Theater. Arthur Stringer wrote the story.

The picture offers Miss Pringle her first opportunity to break away from the queen and vampire type of role with which she has been associated in the past and to reveal a hitherto covered talent for comedy. As the Alaskan miner's daughter, uncouth and unversed in the ways of society, or even of modern society, who comes into violent contact with the conventions in New York City, she presents a figure at once amusing and appealing.

Lowell Sherman appears in the unconventional role of the hero, while others who appear in the cast are Henry Vibart and Robert Cain.

"The Wilderness Woman" was originally published in the Saturday Evening Post. It was adapted to the screen by Paul Bern and Paul Schofield. Much of the comedy in it was injected by Hampton Del Ruth, formerly supervisor of Mack Sennett comedies.

Other features on the same program include "Shivering Spooks," an Our Gang comedy; "Wild America," a screen novelty; "International News," and Larry Canelo, at the organ.

Two little Armenian girls, wards of the Near East Relief in Syria, have just arrived in America to demonstrate rug-weaving at Philadelphia's Sesqui-Centennial Exposition. These children, only 12 years old, directed the weaving of the Oriental rug now on the floor of the White House, which was presented to President Coolidge in token of the gratitude of the Near East for American help. ZANE GREY'S LATEST IS MAKING HIT

Zane Grey's latest "Western" came to town last night, "Desert Gold," as it is called, opened at the Richmond Theater.

The picture was directed by George Seitz, the man who made "The Vanishing American." And it is only fair to say, that while "Desert Gold" is not done on the enormous scale employed in the former production, it can be favorably compared without losing any of its own glamour.

A splendid cast has been given the director and scenarist, Lucien Hubbard, with which to work. Shirley Mason is a pleasing picture as Mercedes, the little Spanish senorita; and Neil Hamilton, the young cavalry soldier, contributes greatly to the action. Robert Frazer, who seems to have struck his stride, is admirable as the happy-go-lucky Easterner; while William Powell makes a dastardly villain.

Briefly, the story is concerned with Neil Hamilton who loves Shirley. The time is the close of the nineteenth century and the location, this side of the Mexican border, on the edge of the Painted Desert. Law and order is represented by Hamilton, the lieutenant of a small troop of cavalrymen. But the country is over run with a gang of desperadoes who rob and kill at will. They are captained by William Powell.

One day the latter happens to see Shirley and wants her for his own. Then when Neil goes off to his patrol, Powell and a bunch raid the hacienda and kill her uncle. But Shirley, disguised as a young boy, escapes on horseback with her faithful Indian servant.

They reach town and hide away. Hamilton discovers what has happened and goes to a hotel, where, if he shows his uniform, a fight is sure to start. At the psychological moment in walks Robert Frazer, an eastern friend of Neil. He promises to help his pal out by aiding in the rescue of the girl. Then the fun and action begin. And you'll never guess who wins Shirley until the last minute.

Other features include "Nothing Matters," a Lloyd Hamilton comedy, and "The Bee," an educational novelty.

President of U. C. Addresses Rotary Session

Dr. W. W. Campbell, president of the University of California and for thirty-five years director of the Lick Observatory, was the principal speaker at the luncheon of the Richmond Rotary club in the Hotel Carquinez yesterday. The subject of his address was: "Our Place in the Universe." He spoke of the astronomical system of which we are a part and illustrated his talk by figures and facts.

At the close of his address he asked the Rotarians to support the measure appearing on the November election ballots for new university buildings on the university campus. He stated that three-fifths of the present buildings had been donated by individuals. The University now has 18,000 students, making it the largest university in the world from the standpoint of enrollments. T. H. DeLap was chairman of the day.

Wearing Her Name in Dots and Dashes of Morse Code on Sweater Is Latest Fad of Summer Girl

Who knows what will happen if this fad keeps on growing in popularity? Introductions may become unnecessary. Undoubtedly there will be a big rush of youthful males to schools which teach telegraphy or the mails will be clogged with instalments of correspondence courses. Some of the sweaters so adorned bear only the wearer's first name. Others, like the one shown above, have the first name on the left and the family name on the right.

EXPERT TALKS ON CHILDREN

(By Universal Service)

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—A man who has spent 23 years in the science of making unruly children be good, gave a series of helpful hints to mothers in a speech here today.

He is Walter Scott Shinn of New York, prominent photographer of children. He spoke before the National Photographers' association on "how to control children."

His hints include the following: Give the child only one toy at a time. Don't let the child have too much of anything. Don't drive the child. Lead him. Address him only in the affirmative. Eliminate the don'ts.

No child is naturally irritable. If this condition obtains he is unhealthy or mentally ill-organized. Children are like the radio. All static should be tuned out for them, static being false or unfriendly ideas.

Mrs. Brunscher Bereaved Twice In Short Time

Mrs. Esther Brunscher, deputy coroner of Martinez received word yesterday of the death of her father, L. E. Hurst, at his home in Fincastle, Kentucky. Hurst's death occurred just a week after the death of Mrs. Brunscher's husband, the late J. P. Brunscher, who died at an Oakland hospital following an extended illness.

Mrs. Brunscher was unaware of her father's serious illness until informed by telegram of his death. Hurst was a pioneer lawyer and was sixty-four years of age. He is survived by six children, two of whom, Mrs. M. Lyons and Mrs. M. Mayo are residents of Long Beach.

NEW CHRYSLER IS SHOWN BY HARRY CURRY

Description of the new Chrysler "50" reveals a combination of features, new to the field of low cost motor cars, which are calculated by the Chrysler corporation to place it rapidly in the forefront among automobiles selling at its price, says Harry Curry, local Chrysler dealer.

These features, the company points out, were made possible largely through its recently announced policy of quality standardization for all Chrysler cars—an ideal that Walter P. Chrysler has been working toward since the announcement of the first Chrysler product, nearly three years ago.

They include unusual body roominess and comfort, remarkably high gasoline mileage and other economy features, unusually smooth engine power and enduring speed ability, easier handling and speed with comfort up to the car's maximum. They indicate scientific engineering and research work with respect to space engineering, body dimensions, dynamic symmetry of design and appearance of the bodies, and the same study with regard to valve sizes, location, timing, shape of combustion chambers and other engine developments that go to make up a highly efficient, economical power plant, yielding unusual performance.

High alloy materials are used throughout the chassis. The actual amount of fine steels and other long-lived materials in this car is greater than in many others selling at twice its price, the company points out.

The L-head type engine is extremely smooth in operation, besides retaining all the characteristic traditional four-cylinder advantages. Transmission of its power to the rear wheels with minimum loss has been accomplished by hanging the engine low in the frame to give straight-line drive to the driving mechanism.

The engine has a five and five-eighths inch bore and a 4 and one-eighth inch stroke. Its rated horsepower is 31.03, with an actual of 35. Piston displacement is 170.3 cubic inches. In line with Chrysler practice of suspending the engine free from the frame to prevent the transmission shocks to it, its front end is cradled on a semi-elliptic steel spring. This is bolted to the gear case cover, with the spring ends resting on the frame cross member, thus literally floating the engine front end in the frame. This arrangement also absorbs the torque impulses. Rear suspension is by steel brackets riveted to the arms on the flywheel housing.

The frame has three heavy cross members, forming a rigid foundation to eliminate body weave, squeaks and rattles that would inevitably present themselves in a frame less rigid.

Lubrication is exceptionally thorough. Reciprocating parts are actually flooded with oil at all speeds. Full force lubrication is provided to all crankshaft and connecting rod bearings from the pump. Spray from a small hole in each connecting rod bearing lubricates each cylinder wall, piston pin, camshaft bearing and entire valve operating mechanism. All other reciprocating engine parts are lubricated by positive spray from the same source, or from the front crankshaft bearings.

Cylinders are cast en bloc, integral with crankcase, with heavy cross web construction for the center main bearing support. Walls are both reamed and honed for glassy, long-wearing qualities. Cylinder head and oil pan as removable to permit easy access to all moving parts.

The unusual engine performance is due in large measure to the use of the special Chrysler pistons. They are of the aluminum alloy, ventilated bridge type, with unusual wearing qualities, as used in both the "70" and "80." Pins are of alloy steel. Specifications demand that their limits be held within two ten-thousandths of an inch in diameter.

The crankshaft is both statically and dynamically balanced and supported on three bronze-backed babbit-lined main bearings.

WHIPPER OF CHORUS GIRL NOT TO ESCAPE

(By Universal Service)
NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Richard G. Elliott, who is in jail in Montreal in connection with the whipping of Violet Anderson here several months ago, may not be able to get away from the New York courts even if he cannot be extradited.

Should he be released from jail he cannot get a passport to leave Canada, it was stated here tonight by government authorities.

He can return to the United States if he wants to. He will either have to do that or stay in Canada.

And he may not be able to stay in Canada for the Canadian authorities, if they hold that he is undesirable, can conduct him to the United States border and tell him to step across.

In that case he will be seized by the American authorities. Under these circumstances, though Elliott may be extradited, he will in all probability land in the toils of the New York law sooner or later.

Child Evangelist To End Services Here Tomorrow

The closing service of Helen Campbell, world's youngest Evangelist will be held tomorrow at the Church of the Full Gospel. The subject of her talk will be "Ye Must Be Born Again."

A large crowd gathered on Thursday night to hear her tell of her life. The church was packed and many people were unable to find seats. Many were held spell-bound by her touching story.

Tomorrow night is the final night of her meeting in this district and she has issued an invitation for all to attend.

DOING THE SPORTING THING

BACK TO THE "RED" GRANGE

"Back to the ice wagon," says Harold "Red" Grange, who will be remembered as something of a football player. Red has finished a rather short career in the movies and admits that he is no marcelled hero of the silver screen.

Grange came back to Wheaton and the ice tongs for but one reason. With the professional football season but a few weeks away, the red head finds himself in no shape at present to buck even a high school line. Grange has his own team this year, the New York Yankees, who will make their debut at the stadium this fall.

The Wheaton marvel's presence in organized pro football will do much to bring success to the gridiron sport, and it those who have frowned at the thought of commercializing football will just look over the list of old college stars who make up the teams in the new league this fall, they will regard the sport in a different light.

KING ALFONSO TO REBUILD SPANISH NAVY

By H. H. STANSBURY
(By Universal Service)

LONDON, August 26.—It has just come to light that King Alfonso, during his recent visit to London, held more than one secret conference with Naval experts, to whom he confided an ambitious plan to rehabilitate the once-proud Spanish navy that since 1898 has consisted of only a few obsolete vessels. Immediately following these conferences, the Spanish monarch became so enthusiastic over his naval expansion plan, he had the Royal Decree authorizing immediate construction of the proposed new units, sent to London for his signature, sent to London for the expenditure of $77,000,000 pesos, or about $220,000,000 in the next ten years.

Provision is made for 12 additional submarines of the C. type, with the modifications which experience has proved advisable.

Auxiliary vessels of a useful kind are to be added. There will be two 7,000-ton oil tankers and three patrol vessels of 250 tons, and a sum of 12,000,000 pesos is provided for the construction of mine-layers and sweepers and other equipment.

Other items in the estimates provide for the establishment in Barcelona of a practical school of naval aeronautics, including a large purchase of supplies for the maintenance of air forces, the purchase of mines and torpedoes and protective equipment for the naval bases, and for the establishment of new naval bases at Mahon and Vigo, with floating docks at each place.

Work in hand is being pushed forward and the construction of the new dock at Cadiz, of 30,000 tons capacity, has been begun. The 61,000-ton floating dock, constructed by a Spanish firm, has been provisionally accepted, at Cartagena.

Alfonso is understood to have been greatly stirred by Mussolini's talk of extending the domain of Italy, although diplomatic relations between Rome and Madrid at the present time are of the friendliest sort.

The Spanish king also informally

Babe Ruth Shows Little "Future Great" How To Hit Home Run When Boys Play at Yankee Stadium

Ten thousand whooping and cheering youngsters were the guests of the Yankees and the St. Louis Browns when Boys' Day was celebrated recently in New York. Although Babe Ruth coached the boys' club of New York, they were the losers, being defeated for the boys' championship by the Everlast Club. Babe is pictured above showing Sammy Griffler, mascot of the Everlasts, how to hold his bat in preparation for walloping out a homer.

re-opened, while in England, the negotiations whereby Spain would get Gibraltar back from the British, giving in return a British base at Ceuta directly across the Straits. The argument advanced in favor of the exchange is that Ceuta affords a fine harbor, while Gibraltar is unprotected save by an artificial breakwater. The British base at the Southern extremity of the Spanish peninsula has been a source of humiliation to Spain for more than a century.

Alfonso's suggestions were courteously listened to by the British officials owing to his royal connections, but the idea of giving up Gibraltar is as unwelcome at the Admiralty now as at any previous time, it is said.

ENGLAND WILL TRY TO BUILD SPORT CHAMPS

By ROBERT J. PREW
(By Universal Service)

LONDON, Aug. 27.—Stirred to action by British defeats in international sporting events this summer, a select body of Englishmen are about to attempt organizing "Councils of Effort" throughout the country.

A meeting will be held in London next week, it is learned, attended by men of wealth and organizing capacity who propose to establish councils in every big center of the country. As soon as a prospective English woman channel swimmer or likely golf or tennis champion appears on the horizon, it is proposed that these councils raise funds for the development of "comers" into the international class.

The basic idea of the new effort is that Britain has material from which champions can be produced, but that organization is lacking for the discovery and development of likely candidates.

BIG MEN IN SPORTS

By ROBERT A. HERFORD
(By Universal Service)

NEW YORK, August 26.—Hilden had just dusted the backline with a whistling forehand drive to give him a clean pass and match point against William M. Johnston in their national championship tennis final at Forest Hills last fall.

The last of the long series of court duels between the world's two greatest tennis players had come to a close—with the usual result. "Little Bill," with a gesture now grown pathetically familiar to the tennis public was graciously congratulating his conqueror on his latest victory—an exhaustive five set struggle. And "Big Bill," with a gesture, perhaps even more familiar was receiving the congratulations. Later, with a gesture still as familiar he would receive the National trophy for the sixth consecutive year.

As the crowd was emptying from the Forest Hills horse show, one veteran tennis fan, an ardent Johnston admirer remarked glumly to his companion:

"You can't get around it—a good big man is always better than a good little man."

He was expressing one of the sports oldest maxims—and perhaps of all its generalities, the truest.

Tennis, perhaps of all sports, offers the most striking case. Where the object of the game is to keep an opponent from hitting a ball by you, while you in turn attempt to pass him, naturally height or reach is of utmost importance. It is this extra inch or so, added to his remarkable ability that makes the tall Tilden, tennis genius.

Johnston, with the hardest hit forehand drive in the game, Richards' with unusual ability backed by the drive of youth, and Kumpage, fortified by the natural craft of the Japanese, have all made desperate, but futile attempts to unseat the rangy champion from his tennis throne.

Paul Wanner, the ex-Seal has been going great in the east. On Thursday, playing against the Giants in six times at the platter Paul slammed a triple, two doubles and three singles. THE BIG GAME

Since the opening of the University of California for the fall term demand after demand has flooded the graduate manager's offices asking for tickets to the big game to be staged on November 20 at the California Memorial stadium. All requests have been turned down so far. The graduate manager has announced that 83,418 seats will be ready for the big game.

It is a mix-up that will take plenty of diplomacy and tact to untangle.

Court Decision Halts Work On Heich-Heichy

(By Universal Service)
SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 27.—A decision handed down late today by the State Supreme Court upset the entire structure of the Heich-Heichy financing and halts construction of the final link of power lines into this city.

The decision was rendered in the injunction suit brought by Adolph Heich, a taxpayer and upheld his contention that the city has no legal right to use funds derived from the sale of Heich-Heichy power for the building of the transmission line.

UNIONS ENTER CHURCH WAR IN MEXICO

The hopes entertained by the government that the Catholic episcopate would swing into line with the governments regulations. These hopes were dissipated by the new defl of the clergy.

Mexican Catholics, Bishop Diaz said, are fully prepared to maintain their struggle indefinitely, or until the religious regulations are rescinded, the constitution reformed and liberty of conscience restored to the people of the republic.

The episcopate statement was issued in answer to an article published in "Excelsior" and credited to a spokesman for the government, which contained a veiled threat that if the clergy failed to submit to the government's religious legislation it is likely to find that the present inclination of the administration to interpret that legislation benevolently will be replaced by a determination to enforce the laws with the utmost severity.

The acceptance of the government's regulations, the statement asserts, would mean that the bishops, priests and Catholic laity would be enslaved to the judicial, political and municipal authorities.

"We hope, and justly so, that with the aid of God, the priests and the Catholic people will know how to obey their prelates, so that the schismatic threat contained in these menaces will not be realized," the statement says.

Three hundred Jalisco school teachers have been dismissed, it is reported. A week ago the State department circulated all teachers, asking a statement giving their support to the government policy on the religious question. It is declared that those who returned unsatisfactory replies are being dismissed. The Jalisco teachers are protesting that their dismissal is an attack on their personal liberty.

Trimings and Roof to Be Put On Spezzi Home

The rafters, roof and window sashes will be completed on the Spezzi home near Stege Junction on Sunday, according to James Walker, who will have charge of the work. The sides of the building have been completed and the first coat of paint has been put on.

A composition roof will be built this Sunday. The rafters will be finished and the window sashes will be installed. This will almost complete the home.

Volunteer workers will be welcomed by Walker and will be given their tasks. The finishing of the roof and the other parts make the building ready for the work of the painters, which will start a week from Sunday.

Refreshments will be served at noon to the workers.

S. P. ANSWERS SUIT OF THE GOLDEN GATE

Act of 1923, which first required such certificates, provides that it shall not apply to a company then having vessels in operation, and the Southern Pacific company points out that it then did have vessels in operation to Alameda Pier and a vehicle ferry to the foot of Broadway, Oakland, the Alameda Pier being on the route of that ferry.

The answer, a lengthy document, is signed by W. A. Worthington, vice president of the Southern Pacific company, and by Evan J. Foulds and Henley C. Booth, its attorneys. The history of the various railroad companies that operated in Alameda and San Francisco counties is stated in detail.

The first ferry operation was early in the '60's up the Oakland Estuary by the vehicle ferry operated by the San Francisco & Oakland railroad company, which in 1869 became merged into the Central Pacific railroad company, which in 1885 leased its properties to the Southern Pacific. It is claimed that a vehicle ferry has been continuously operated on that route since early in the '60's.

The San Francisco & Alameda railroad company in 1862 built a wharf at the foot of what is now Pacific avenue, Alameda, and operated a ferry service between that wharf and San Francisco until it was purchased by the Central Pacific, the first trans-continental passengers reaching San Francisco in 1869 over the Pacific avenue wharf, which was at the point at which the Golden Gate Ferry company proposes to establish its Alameda service. In 1871 the Oakland Long Wharf was constructed and vehicle ferry operated from that wharf.

Meantime from 1862 the San Francisco & Oakland railroad company had operated a vehicle ferry from Oakland wharf which continued until 1882 when that wharf was expanded into the Oakland Mole and vehicles have ever since been continuously carried on ferry boats running to the Mole.

The roads built by Senator James G. Fair from Alameda to Santa Cruz were built beginning with 1878 when a railroad was completed to Alameda Point on the Alameda side of the Oakland Estuary where the Southern Pacific car shops now stand, and a freight passenger and vehicle ferry to San Francisco placed in operation. In 1882 the Fair interests began construction of the Alameda Pier with a railroad line and a plank road wagon road on the pier, and San Francisco ferry service was begun in 1884 from the west end of the pier. It continued until 1895 when the plank road was replaced by a railroad. The Fair interests, which were known as the Southern Pacific Coast Railway company, were purchased by and their properties leased to, the Southern Pacific in 1887, and it is claimed in the answer that since the lease of the Central Pacific interests in 1885 and the Fair interests, in 1887 Southern Pacific's trans-bay service has been performed as a unified transportation service for the handling of freight and passengers across the bay from and to points on both sides best adapted to public convenience and facility of operation.

With the answer the Southern Pacific gave notice that on next Monday it would apply to the United States District Court for an order setting aside the order restraining Alameda operation issued by the State Court on the application of the Golden Gate Ferry

Charlestons As He Waits to Go To the Gallows

(By Universal Service)

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 27.—After dancing the Charleston in the death cell on the eve of his execution Henry Gafford, 53, negro, walked unflinchingly to the gallows of Folsom Prison this morning and was hanged for the murder of John Scott, an aged rancher of Wasco, Kern County.

The scaffold trap was sprung at 10:15 o'clock and 12 minutes and 45 seconds later Gafford was pronounced dead.

Frankly admitting that he shot Scott during a quarrel on a ranch where he was employed Gafford faced his doom with a singular buoyancy of spirit.

Following a hearty breakfast he shook hands with Warden J. J. Smith as he stood at the death cell and walked without assistance into the death chamber.

The Charleston became a dance for probably the first time in history last night when the shaver amazed his guards by suddenly breaking into syncopated steps to the death cell. Gafford danced with mad abandon for several minutes and then called for a late supper of pork chops and watermelon. "I'm not afraid," he said this morning. "I am ready to go."

"Lack of Hot Water Lands Landlord in Jail" In other words, he got into hot water because he was out of it.

company. It claims that the restraining order was issued without notice and on an improper showing, that the decision of whether an injunction should be granted against the Southern Pacific's application should be deferred until the hearing on the case on the merits and that the continuance of the restraining order will for an indefinite time deprive the traveling public of an immediate, direct automobile ferry to Alameda. It is also urged that the Golden Gate Ferry company should not have an injunction because it stood by without protest and allowed the Southern Pacific to build a road and slip at a cost of $180,000, and did not make its application for an injunction until the work had been completed.

Passenger Traffic Manager F. S. McGinnis, of the Southern Pacific company, states in an affidavit filed with the papers that the Southern Pacific company will begin the transportation of automobiles to Alameda Pier as soon as legal restraint is lifted, that it is suffering daily damage by not being permitted to do so, and that the public is being inconvenienced by being deprived of that means of transportation.

With the papers were also filed affidavits of former ferry boat captains and other retired employees relating to the places and method of operation of the ferry boats in the '60's and '70's.

Legion May Use Leviathan for Its Trip to France

(By Universal Service)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—The American Legion today filed a request with the Shipping Board to charter the Leviathan for their exclusive use to attend the proposed convention in Paris in 1927. The travel committee of the Legion will confer with the President of the emergency fleet corporation tomorrow to see if it can be arranged. Due to the fact that the Leviathan is now off-reel for sale to private owners, the board considered it likely that the request would have to be temporarily rejected.

months with his brother in Hollywood and would appreciate the appropriateness of interment there.

Only close friends and persons from Valentino's native town saw the body before the coffin lid was clamped in place. Among those who saw him were thirty members of the Castellana club, which membership is composed entirely of natives of Castellana, Italy, Valentino's birthplace. They gazed intently for several moments at the dead face and then departed with heavy sighs.

Plans are under way today for memorials to the shock in Hollywood, Chicago and Castellana.

The appointment of the Rudolph Valentino memorial committee is announced by Ullman. Besides himself, others on the committee are Joseph Schenck, chairman of United Artists' corporation, which employed Valentino, and James R. Quirk, editor of photoplay magazine.
